Unións, Unimás, and Galavisión. Additionally, the U.S. has several networks devoted mostly or completely to the sport, including Gol TV and beIN Sport USA. The size of the annual TV market in the U.S. for annual club soccer competitions was $166 billion as of 2009. The club soccer competitions that generate the most annual revenue from TV audiences today in the United States are England's Premier League ($167m), Major League Soccer ($90m), the Mexican league ($50m), Spain's La Liga ($516m), and the UEFA Champions League ($10m).[128] The most widely accessed televised soccer league in the United States is Mexico's Liga MX, which has most of its games televised live and free on television channels Azteca, Telemundo, Unimás and Univision. Fox began showing English Premier League matches on network TV in 2011, the first time that Premier League matches aired on U.S. broadcast TV.[129] U.S. TV rights for the English Premier League were sold to NBC Sports in 2012 for $250 million for three years beginning with the 2013–14 season.[130] Viewership for the Premier League's 2013–14 season on NBC Sports was 32 million, more than double the previous season.[131] The Premier League earns higher ratings on NBCSN than the National Hockey League, despite the fact that the Premier League is shown in the morning while NHL games are in primetime. [132] Major League Soccer has received broadcast fees from ESPN since 2008, and MLS signed a three-year deal in 2011 with NBC Sports to nationally televise 40 matches per year from 2012 to 2014. MLS has since then signed new television agreements with ESPN, FOX Sports, and Univision worth in total $90 million per year from 2015 to 2022. In addition, the 2010 UEFA Champions League final was broadcast live on the Fox Network, marking the first time that a soccer match between two European club teams was televised in the U.S. on English-language broadcast television.[133] Major U.S. TV contracts (club competitions) Competition Annual revenue English language contract Spanish language contract Average viewership Premier League (England) $167 ml NBC Sports $2.7bn (2022/23-2027-28) Telemundo 609,000 (NBC, USA and Peacock) (2021-22)[134] Liga MX (Mexico) $120 ml Fox Sports ESPN Deportes, Fox Deportes, Telemundo, and Univision 847,000 (Univision) 801,000 (Unimás) (2014)[135] UEFA Champions League (Europe) $95 ml CBS Sports (2020–2024) Univision 282,000 (FS1)[136] Major League Soccer $90 ml ESPN & Fox Sports $600 ml ESPN & Fox Sports $600 ml (2015–2022) Univision $120 ml (2015–2022) 310,000 (ESPN) 197,000 (FS1) 230,000 (Unimas) La Liga (Spain) $16 ml ESPN/ESPN+ ESPN/ESPN+ 213,000 (beIN) Bundesliga (Germany) ?? The Mexico national football team is also a popular team featured on Spanish-language television and on ESPN. In addition to the World Cup, other international soccer competitions involving the U.S. team have become more popular among TV viewers. The 2007 CONCACAF Gold Cup attracted record television viewership, with the Univision telecast of the final between the United States and Mexico ranking as the third-most-watched Spanish-language program of all-time in the United States, beaten only by two FIFA World Cup finals matches. The 2009 Confederations Cup Final featuring the United States attracted 6.9 million viewers (including both the English and Spanish broadcasts).[137] The 2013 World Cup qualifier between the U.S. and Mexico drew 7 million viewers, higher than the 5.8 million average viewers of the 2013 NHL Stanley Cup finals.[138] Three 2013 Gold Cup matches were broadcast on the main Fox network channel, the first time since 2002 that a U.S. national team match outside of the World Cup was broadcast on network TV.[139] TV networks in the U.S. have also begun showing international soccer tournaments that do not include the United States. Euro 2008 was shown on ESPN and ABC. Viewership for the Euro 2012 was 51% higher than 2008, with the 2012 final watched by over 4 million viewers.[140] The viewership on ESPN of the group-stage matches of the 2013 Confederations Cup was 26% higher than the 2009 tournament, even though the U.S. did not play in the 2013 tournament.[141] Major U.S. TV contracts (international competitions) Competition Annual revenue English language contract Spanish language contract Average viewership FIFA World Cup $134 ml Fox Sports $475 ml (2015–2026) Telemundo $600 ml (2015–2026) 4.6m (ESPN/ABC) 3.5m (Univision) (2014)[142] FIFA Women's World Cup *1 Fox Sports (2015–2026) Telemundo (2015–2026) 1.5m (ESPN) (2011)[143] FIFA Confederations Cup *1 Fox Sports (2015–2026) Telemundo (2015–2026) 1.6m (Univision) (2013)[144] European Championship$ 330 ml ESPN (2016–22) 1.3m (ESPN) 325,000 (ESPN Dep.) The rights to the Euro also includes rights for European World Cup qualifiers, as well as the UEFA Nations League FIFA World Cup on TV As of 2017[update], the most popular soccer event on television in the U.S. was the 2015 FIFA Women's World Cup Final. It was the most watched soccer match in American history with nearly 26.7 million combined viewers.[147][148] more than the 2015 NBA Finals and Stanley Cup.[149] It was also the most watched Spanish-language broadcast in tournament history.[148] More than 750 million viewers were reported to have watched the match worldwide. [150] The second highest viewership in the U.S. for a soccer match was 26.5 million combined viewers for Germany vs. Argentina in the 2014 FIFA World Cup Final.[147] Previously, the 1999 FIFA Women's World Cup Final tallied 17.9 million viewers in the U.S.[147] In 2005, the U.S. TV rights for the 2010 and 2014 World Cups were sold to ABC/ESPN and Univision for $425 million in "the biggest TV deal in a single country in FIFA's history." [151][152][153] The telecasts of the 2006 FIFA World Cup Final attracted an estimated 17 million American viewers, higher than the 15.8 million average viewership of the 2006 World Series.[154][155] The total TV viewership in the U.S. for all the matches including the final for the 2010 World Cup was 112 million viewers, a 22% increase over viewing numbers for the 2006 World Cup.[156] The 2010 World Cup final game drew 24.3 million viewers in the United States,[157] higher than the 14.3 million average viewership of the 2010 World Series.[155][158] Landon Donovan's dramatic game-winning goal against Algeria that advanced the US team to the knockout stage of the 2010 World Cup resulted in jubilant celebrations across the United States. In 2011, the U.S. TV rights for the 2018 and 2022 World Cups were sold to Fox and Telemundo for a record $1.1 billion, more than any other country in the world, and 147 percent higher than the 2010 and 2014 TV rights.[151] By 2014, the World Cup was considered an elite sports property on U.S. television.[159] The USA–Portugal match during the 2014 World Cup registered 24.7 million viewers in the US, with 6.5 million viewers on Univision and 18.2 million viewers on ESPN, making it the most viewed program on ESPN, other than NFL or college football games, and eclipsing viewership numbers of other high-profile sports events such as MLB's World Series, the NBA Finals, and the NHL's Stanley Cup Finals.[159][160] The 2014 FIFA World Cup also generated strong internet traffic, with the tournament generating more viewers via websites and apps than the 2012 Summer Olympics.[161] World Cup Tournament: cumulative combined U.S. viewership by year Here are the complete tournament cumulative viewership combined totals for each World Cup tournament since 1994. Americans playing in foreign leagues Since the early 1990s, several Americans have found opportunities playing soccer at the highest levels of foreign leagues. Among the first Americans to become regulars in foreign leagues were John Harkes at Sheffield Wednesday and Derby County in England, Eric Wynalda at Saarbrücken in Germany, and Kasey Keller at Millwall in England. Since then, other Americans have played for clubs that have participated in the knockout rounds of the Champions League and Europa League, such as Brad Friedel with Tottenham Hotspur, DaMarcus Beasley with PSV Eindhoven, and Christian Pulisic with Borussia Dortmund and currently with Chelsea.
